SPACE FUSION: RESHAPING THE WORKPLACE

As the lines between work, life, learning, and play continue to blur, design elements from previously distinct sectors are blending together as well. Through a design process called Space Fusion, hybridized typologies create sophisticated, cultured approaches to experiential environments. At HOK, this cross-pollination happens between its hospitality, healthcare, sports, and research practices, while filtering into the workplace studio.

By developing multi-dimensional and diverse work settings, companies provide more work-life balance for their employees while giving them another reason to stay onboard. This discussion will explore how Space Fusion is contributing to optimal experiences for tomorrow's workplace users.
